"Flea Hunting: The Historical Dimension of Air Power and Counterinsurgency Warfare"

With the ongoing conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq, counterinsurgency (COIN) warfare is very much a 'hot' topic of discussion within defence circles. There is a growing body of literature devoted not only to current theatres of combat, but also predicting that COIN-type operations will dominate warfare in the near future. If true, air power practitioners will need to explore COIN warfare in all of its dimensions: past, present and future. The rigorous study of air power as it applies to COIN was never a constant priority for the air power community; it waxed or waned depending on the current war or organizational goals. Perhaps the only constant has been that whenever air power was available, it was employed, or misemployed, in COIN conflicts throughout history. It is doubtful that this will change in the future; therefore, the onus is on us to learn from the past.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Beyond Afghanistan

Canadian security and defence priorities in light of – and in spite of – the Afghanistan commitment

Annual Conference of the Security and Defence Forum (SDF)
Hosted by the Centre for Security and Defence Studies of the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University

27-29 September 2007
Sheraton Ottawa Hotel

The NATO mission in Afghanistan and Canada's contribution to that mission remain a major focus of attention and resources of the Canadian security and defence community. Yet, Canada's defence and security interests are not limited to the Afghanistan conflict. This year's SDF conference will look beyond Afghanistan at the other Canadian security and defence priorities and challenges, both in light of, and in spite of, the Afghanistan commitment. Beyond Afghanistan, what regional interests and threats demand our attention? What impact is the Afghanistan conflict likely to have on those other regional interests? What are the force requirements to adequately address them? And will the force structure the CF inherits from the Afghan mission be suited to future operations in these regions and the other threats Canada faces? To answer these questions, we propose four panels:

- Canada's regional interests and threats beyond Afghanistan. This panel might address Canada's interests in Asia, Africa, Latin America, the Middle East, or Eastern Europe. Presenters might discuss how and why the Canadian military may be asked to intervene in these regions in the future.
- Canada First – the Canadian arctic and aid of the civil power. This panel will focus on the "Canada First" idea of defence policy, and would include paper/presentations about the Canadian military's role in defending arctic sovereignty and in assisting other government departments during natural/terrorist disasters, the Vancouver Olympics, or aboriginal standoffs.
- Combat veterans and human dimension of the Afghan commitment. This panel will address the impact and implications of the increasing number of CF combat veterans. This panel might feature a paper/presentation on the history of Canadian veteran policies, a psychological/sociological analysis of how injured veterans from operations in Afghanistan are reintegrating into the armed forces and Canadian society, and a presentation on how images of wounded veterans and casualties might shape Canada's willingness to intervene in dangerous and war-torn environments in the future.

- Force structure in light of – and in spite of – Afghanistan. This panel will explore how Afghanistan has and will determine the force structure of the CF. At issue will be how an Afghan-inspired force structure will affect the CF's future roles, defence expenditures and procurements, and recruitment and retention goals. The panel may also address civil-military relations. Above all, the panel is meant to bring together issues from the day's previous panels into a discussion about how the CF will look in the near future, and what this means for Canadian defence policy.

SDF centre faculty, researchers, and graduate students are encouraged to submit proposals for papers or presentations on relevant topics. We also welcome proposals from current or recent SDF award recipients (MA, PhD and Post-Doctoral Fellows). While formal papers are not required, they are preferred; at a minimum we would require a summary of the presentation to be prepared in advance so that it can be made available to commentators.

The working language of the conference will be English and French. Simultaneous translation will be provided.

Proposals should be sent as soon as possible and received by us no later than July 1 to:

Prof. Chris Penny
Centre for Security and Defence Studies
Norman Paterson School of International Affairs
1125 Colonel By Drive
Ottawa, ON K1S 5B6
fax: 613-520-2889
email: chris_penny@carleton.ca

Those whose proposals are accepted will be informed by the end of July. CSDS will reimburse the travel and accommodation costs of panel presenters. If presenters are eligible for SDF National Conference Fund support, we ask that they approach their home centre directly to have travel costs reimbursed.
